

743 Miles of Roads Built by State in 1928, Says Report

Replacement Projects, Completed Or Under Contract, On Lincoln Highway Included In Statement Presented To Gov. Fisher.

Final reports covering every phase of the far flung activities of the department of highways during 1928 were submitted to Gov. John S. Fisher.

The report went into detail on each of those activities, recounting the road projects under construction, dangerous grade crossings eliminated and bridges constructed. It also dealt with the lesser activities such as maintenance, placing of route and crossing markers and tree planting.

During the year a total of 743 miles of road was built. Of that amount 498 miles were laid by contract and 245 by department forces. Miles of pavement built under the state aid plan totaled an additional 133.

The report listed ten major projects placed under contract or completed during the year. They include a twelve-mile project on route 66, thirteen miles on route 257, another thirteen miles on route 97 and big replacement projects on both the Lincoln and William Penn highways.

The department, during the year, eliminated twenty-six grade crossings at a cost of $2,280,000. Reconstruction of eight dangerous overhead or undergrade railroad crossing bridges cost an additional $297,000.

Others Under Way

Public service commission orders have been issued, but work not completed, providing for the elimination of forty-three additional grade crossings at an estimated cost of $4,052,655.

Proceedings pending before the commission provide for the elimination of fifteen grade crossings which will cost $1,410,154.

The report lists three major bridge projects. One is on route 211 in McKean county, one on route 5 in Luzerne county and another on route 66 in Armstrong county.

Once built a road must be maintained. The report told in detail of the "section forces" which six days in each week must be on guard to prevent deterioration of the pavement, keep the berms in repair and be ready at any hour, day or night, to remove snow and scatter ashes at danger points.

The department has installed 100 signs marking the approach to dangerous railroad crossings. This was the beginning of a comprehensive plan of protecting railroad crossings. Pennsylvania was the first state to undertake systematic, complete marking of railroad crossings and developed original standards and specifications for the signs.

During the year 1300 miles of principal routes were designated as through traffic highways and all approaches were marked with slow and stop signs.

FREE MASONS SCORE VICTORY

New Hearing In Emblem Case Is Denied And Dauphin Court Dismisses Writ.

Another court victory was scored at Harrisburg Tuesday by the Free and Accepted Masons, the original Masonic organization, when a new hearing was denied in the Masonic emblem case. The Dauphin county court dismissed the writ upon which the new organization, the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, sought to compel the secretary of the commonwealth to register it for the exclusive use of nine emblems used in common by both organizations.

The emblem case has been watched with considerable interest in Gettysburg where both Masonic bodies have constituted lodges.

The decision was handed down by Judge E. M. Biddle, Jr., of Carlisle, and Judge H. W. Whitehead, of Williamsport, who presided in the Dauphin county court during the hearing of this long and vigorously contested case. The decision probably will be appealed.

DITCHES BUS TO AVOID A TRUCK CRASH

Woman Suffers Lacerations Of Head And Knee; Icy Roadway Is Cause.

Mrs. Edward Foster, of Youngstown, Ohio, suffered lacerations of the head and knee when a large bus, operating out of Gettysburg, was driven into the ditch to avoid colliding with a large truck near Seven Stars, shortly after midnight this morning.

The icy and slick condition of the highway, caused by the fall of snow, sleet and rain Tuesday afternoon and early evening, is given as the primary cause of the accident.

The big bus had left Gettysburg, bound for Pittsburgh. When at Seven Stars, a truck, approaching from the West, started careening across the highway, at the same time that the bus is reported to have started to skid. The truck driver was unable to bring his machine to a halt or keep it in a straight advance motion. The bus driver, sensing the possibility of a head-on collision, veered his big machine into the ditch.

Bus Is Damaged

The front bumper was broken, one headlight was damaged, the right front fender was bent, windshield and two windows smashed and the right running board damaged. Bits of flying glass inflicted slight lacerations upon Mrs. Foster.

Mechanics of the C. W. Epley garage towed the big bus into town and this morning the machine continued on its trip.

Mechanics told towing trucks were kept busy throughout the night pulling out ditched machines, that had skidded off the icy highway.

The Rev. Harry Daniels, former pastor of the Gettysburg Methodist Episcopal church and now located at Mechanicsburg, was towed in from the battlefield, Tuesday afternoon, when his machine stalled in the snow, after skidding off the road.

A number of machines were ditched on all highways last night and outside of scratched fenders and, in a few instances, slight damage to the cars, the mishaps were not serious.

Stone Jug Trio 'Hooked' For $7 By Bogus Officer

Graduate Of Correspondence School For Sleuthing Presents Credentials And Seeks Warrant From Prosecutor Butt.

State and local police are looking for a "fake" police officer, who "flam" flamed three county youths out of all the money they had under threat of arresting them as violators of the prohibition laws.

According to the story as told by Officer George A. Aughinbaugh, three young "bloodes", from Stone Jug, came to Gettysburg last Saturday evening, partook of some "liquid refreshments" and became slightly inebriated.

The trio were accosted on Carlisle street by a stranger, who told them he was a prohibition agent, and that they were in imminent danger of being arrested. He promised to "fix things" for them, if they would pay him. Only too anxious to escape arrest, the young men turned over to the "fake" officer all the money they had, a total of between $6 and $7.

After taking their money, the "grip" advised the trio to get out of town as quickly as possible, and thinking they had been given a good "steer" the three young men "made tracks" for Stone Jug. One of the trio has given Officer Aughinbaugh a fairly good description of the "fake" officer. He was described as a fairly young man.

State police are endeavoring to connect this little "flam" game and a young man, who presented himself to District Attorney John P. Butt this week, asking for a warrant to make an arrest in the Wrong Addresses Send Cards Astray

The bureau of motor vehicles has been flooded with complaints of operators of motor vehicles to the effect that they have not received renewal application forms for their 1929 driver's license but their failure to receive such renewal forms is due to their neglect to furnish the bureau of motor vehicles with their proper address, Benjamin G. Eynon, registrar of motor vehicles, announced.

"Operators who move from one address to another and fail to notify the bureau of motor vehicles of their change of address cannot expect to receive renewal forms. Operators will save themselves a great deal of trouble if they will make sure that the bureau of motor vehicles has their proper address," Registrar Eynon said.

2 U. S. JUDGES FOR THIS AREA

Senate Judiciary Committee Reports Favorably On Another Judge For District.

The senate judiciary committee made a favorable report to the senate, Tuesday, on the Reed-Graham bill to authorize the president to appoint an additional judge for the United States district court for the Middle district of Pennsylvania, which includes Adams county.

Judge Albert W. Johnson is the present federal judge in the Middle district, and agitation for the appointment of an additional judge has been fomenting for several years.

At about the same time the passage of the bill by the House was blocked when Representative La Guardia, of New York City, objected to its adoption because, he said, he wished time to further study the measure.

See Early Passage

It is expected that this bill which has the backing of the Justice Department, the officials of the courts in the district and the lawyers practicing in the district, will be passed by both the Senate and House before this session of Congress adjourns on March 4.

The bill was introduced simultaneously in the Senate and House by Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, and Representative George Graham, of Philadelphia, who intend to keep pushing it to the front until it is passed.

The following counties compose the Middle District: Adams, Bradford, Cameron, Carbon, Center, Clinton, Columbia, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Fulton, Huntingdon, Juniata, Lackawanna, Lebanon, Luzerne, Lycoming, Mifflin, Monroe, Montour, Northumberland, Perry, Pike, Potter, Snyder, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, Union, Wayne, Wyoming and York.

Following the snow, however, rain fell, and this presented another problem for the maintenance force. As soon as it was reported that the rain was freezing on the highways, workers sprinkled ashes on dangerous curves and on hills as a safeguard for motorists.

Bright sunshine today helped considerably in keeping the highways free from icy surfaces, and helped to change much of the snow into water, which made freshets of every stream in the county.

Cutters Are Out

In Gettysburg, where the snow was beaten down by traffic before it could be removed by snow plows, the streets were ideal for sleighing, and one or two cutters were seen here, the first time this winter.

The snow gave boys and girls the first opportunity to try out Christmas sleds, and on every hill in and near Gettysburg laughing, shouting youngsters disported themselves in the sport.

Slippery sidewalks here this morning were changed into sloppy pavements during the forenoon as the sun beat down and the temperature went up.

HONOR AUTHOR, KNOWN IN TOWN

Guild Selects "The Magic Island," By William B. Seabrook, January Book.

"The Magic Island," by William B. Seabrook, a story of religions in Haiti, has been chosen by The Literary Guild as its book for January, thereby conferring a signal upon a young author, whose parents and himself are well-known to many Gettysburgians.

The author is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Levin Seabrook, of Westminster, Maryland. Mrs. Seabrook was Miss Myra Phelps Buehler, of Gettysburg. The elder Mr. Seabrook is a graduate of Gettysburg college and the Lutheran theological seminary here. After serving in the ministry for a number of years, he returned to Westminster where he practiced law and wrote.

His son, William B. Seabrook, who also is the author of "Adventures in Arabia," is a former newspaper man, and has traveled extensively.

Of the new book by Seabrook, The Literary Guild says: "This book—the Literary Guild choice for January—is the outstanding success of the new year. William Seabrook discovered on Haiti a depth of emotional spontaneity unknown to white men. A living religion mingling Voodoo, dark orgies and the Cross, and, by contrast, a sophisticated French negro civilization now made color-conscious by the white occupation, from such absorbing material Mr. Seabrook has created a distinguished literary work."

Sidelights of New York

By Richard G. Massock

New York—About Chinatown on a snowy Sunday afternoon:

Garrulous, overcoated Chinese gabbling gaily as they hurry along narrow sidewalks of their own little "city." All in Grand street store clothes, one even wearing a derby. Not a woman is in sight, even in the food shops, where men are buying vegetables.

A bad day for tourists, so the natives have Chinatown to themselves. Except in the missions, where there are few orientals, but many white derelicts. The most prosperous mission has a line of vagrants, waiting to get in where it's warm. Also up-towners, attracted by its radio broadcasts.

Inside all available standing room is taken, a policeman keeping an eye clear. The cellar once was a Chinese theater. Now gospel quotations are painted over the oriental hunting scenes on the wall. And a quartet sings "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" in the room where slant-eyed stars once gestured to the accompaniment of squeaky tunes from Peking. Telephone calls from listeners-in are relayed to the rostrum. "Mrs. So-and-so in Newark is enjoying our service."

The breath of the man next to you smells of "smoke," the vile firewater they sell on the East Side. So does the breath of the panhandler outside. The half-dollar you give him for sleeping space in a Bowery flophouse will go for more of the stuff.

Diversions

Around a corner is the Thalia theatre, now the Chinese playhouse, oldest theatre in New York and looking it. Formerly it was the old Bowery theatre, first built in 1826 and four times destroyed by fire. The present structure was erected in 1845 and was used for German and Hebrew drama before the moon-eyed laundryman took it over. Theatre fires are rare these days, so it still stands, while next door a movie theatre is soon to come down. There are other picture shows in the neighborhood, 10 and 20 cent places, where the Chinese go to see Tim McCoy in "Foreign Devils," or an obscure Hollywood blonde in "Hearts and Orange Blossoms."

Chilled, you enter a Chinese pool room, but feel so conspicuous at being the only occidental there that you back out when a player starts. He looks like Sam Lee, who tears your shirts and loses your socks. Sam very seldom loses the whole bundle, as he formerly did, however, for now his tickets bear Arabic numerals in addition to the hieroglyphics.

You decide to dine, and pass up a place where Americans are eating Chow Mein off imitation teakwood tables, in favor of a white-tile restaurant where Chinese are eating fried egg sandwiches off a counter.

Sunday Gems

A few blocks away, just off the approach to Manhattan bridge, is Chrystie street, with a whole block of jewelry stores in the midst of tenements. Here you may buy a diamond or have a watch repaired on Sunday, if you wish. Not wishing, you retrace your steps to the "L" and return uptown.

Asks Reports From State Industries

Almost 25,000 industrial report blanks have been forwarded to manufacturers in Pennsylvania by the bureau of statistics of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs. The forms ask for information on the industrial situation during the year 1928. Under the law the reports must be returned to the department by January 31.

Following the receipt of the questionnaires the department's statistical bureau begins compiling records, which, when completed, show in detail just what Pennsylvania accomplished in an industrial way during the year. The reports seek information on production, valuation, invested capital, employees, salaries and wages paid, quantities produced and numerous other subjects, so that complete details may be on file.

FANNIE BRICE MYMAN By Arline de Haas

Copyright 1928 Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

"MY MAN," starring Fannie Brice, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Fanny Brice is raising her brother, Phil, and her sister, Audrey, for whom she makes every sacrifice. But Audrey leaves home to "live her own life." In the costume shop where she works, Fanny's voice is "discovered" by Lazarus, art director for Waldo, theatrical producer, who takes her to Waldo. During the audition Fanny learns of Audrey's interest in Waldo. Heartbroken, she fails in singing. Then Fanny helps a man, Tom, who is broke, and believing he loves her, precipitates an engagement. Audrey returns and Tom becomes infatuated. On the eve of the wedding, Fanny sees Tom kissing Audrey. Tom and Audrey run off. A wedding party arrives.

And then some one shouted: "Kiss the bride! Everybody kiss the bride!" And they all scrambled for places about Fanny, trying to kiss her, laughing, pushing each other back and forth in mad hilarity.

Fanny stood silent and subdued, accepting everything, not even speaking. She felt as though she were choking, and she was afraid to trust her voice.

Now they led her to the table of presents and insisted that she open those they had left for her to open.

Fanny stood there, a tragic figure.

admire those that had already been opened. And mechanically Fanny obeyed, forcing herself, she didn't know quite how, to smile and even explain a little as the gifts came to view. It didn't seem to matter to her. Everybody was too excited to pay much attention to her words; they were busy enjoying their own jokes, waiting to see how the others would react to their gifts.

"Say, where's this Tom we've all been hearing about?" One of the boys shouted the question, and the others took it up. "Yes, where's Tom? Isn't he a part of the wedding too? Thought you always had to have a groom with a bride," they teased.

Fanny knew they were waiting for an answer, felt the silence that was coming over the group. She must tell them something. They were asking for Tom. Where was Tom? Quick! She must think of an answer. Tom, he was with Audrey, most likely. Tom and Audrey. Together some place. She fought back the tears that she felt were already in her eyes.

"Tom?" She forced a smile, hesitated a moment and then went on. "Why—why Tom's trying on his—his dress suit!"

A shout of laughter went up. Jokes were bandied about. A man sat down at the piano and struck up the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

"Here comes the bride—see her long stride—
See how she waddles from side to side."

They parodied the words, taking up the song and shrilling lustily. A girl and a young man did a cake-walk imitation of a bridal couple coming down the aisle.

Suddenly Fanny noticed Lazarus. It was the first she had seen him. For he had been in the background, not taking part in the gaiety. He looked quiet and serene, and, somehow, sympathetic. She found her way through the crowd and reached his side.

"Good evening, Mr. Lazarus," they shook hands. "It was nice of you to come."

"It was nice of you to have me," he said soberly. He had been waiting for Fanny, and he had seen that she was strangely preoccupied. Her face was so white and drawn; she looked ill. He started to say something about it but caught himself and decided he'd better not. Whatever was worrying her, she had enough to do to keep the party going. He'd best pretend not to notice anything amiss.

"Can you find a place to sit down?" Fanny asked. "It's terribly crowded. I know, with so many people in here."

"Don't you worry about me, Miss Brice. You've got enough to attend to," Lazarus reminded her. "It's all right—having a fine time. There, they want you to sing."

"Oh, but I can't—I can't," Fanny pleaded.

But they were pulling her over to the piano, silencing her protests with shouts of laughter; drowning out her negotiations with affirmations that she should sing. Wearily she leaned against the piano. It was easier to consent than to try to withstand their importunities. What did it matter, anyhow. To sing or not to sing—that did it matter. Audrey and Tom—Audrey and Tom. They were gone. She had sent them away—together.

The pianist turned over some music and began to play "My Man," Fanny's favorite song. He was jazzing the introduction. The crowd grew more silent, whispering, laughing lightly, keeping time to the beat of the notes.

"He's not much for looks! . . . and no hero of our books! Is my man . . . Two or three girls has he! . . . that he likes as well as me! But I love him . . ."

The girls were tapping with their feet to the rhythm of the tune; swaying; shaking their heads. Lazarus leaned back in his chair, his arms folded, looking slightly bored.

But as Fanny repeated the well known words something of their pathos crept into her voice. Unconsciously she was slowing down, losing the jazz effect. Something of this belonged to her; expressed her sorrow.

"Oh, my man . . . I love him so . . . he'll never know . . . All my life is just despair . . . but I don't care . . ."

That was it. All her life was despair. She knew it, now. Care? She cared so much it hurt, and in hurting it hurt down all thought, all care for herself. She could never forget Tom. She'd always remember him, no matter what happened. "When he takes up in his arms the world is bright . . . all right . . ."

Her voice broke. Tom wasn't there to take her in his arms. He wouldn't be there any more, ever. He'd never come back. The world couldn't be bright for her, ever again.

"What's the difference if I say I'll go away . . . When I know I'll come back on my knees some day . . ."

The tears came into her eyes. She stood there, a tragic figure, alone with her sorrow. Something of her feeling of torment was communicating itself to the people lined about the walls of the room. They stared at Fanny.

"For whatever my man is . . . I am his . . . For ever—more . . ."

The last wailing notes died into a complete silence. Lazarus was leaning forward, his eyes fixed on the girl, almost unbelieving. What a voice—what a way of putting that song over. The girl was great—no doubt about it. She took his breath away with the sheer beauty of her throaty cry.

Suddenly the spell was broken. Everybody began to applaud, to call out. But with a swift movement Fanny was out of the door and racing down the corridor. She couldn't stand it any longer. Her heart was broken.

She sped down the stairs, not knowing or caring where she was going. Then the familiar sight of Mrs. Schultz's door caught her eye. She stopped, and knocked. The dressmaker opened the door.

"Why, Fanny, what's the matter," she gasped, staring in amazement at this strange-faced girl who stood in the doorway.

"Mrs. Schultz! Oh, Mrs. Schultz!" And then Fanny began to cry.

"There, now." The kindly woman took the girl in her arms and drew her into the room. She asked no questions but simply led her to a lounge and sat down with her, patting her shoulder.

Upstairs the others looked about, wondering at Fanny's disappearance. Only Marie had begun to have an idea as to what had happened. While Fanny had been singing she had noticed that the engagement ring was gone from her friend's finger. She hadn't thought much of it at the moment, and then she suddenly began to piece things together—Fanny's red eyes; this way she had sung the words to the song; the fact that she had never been without the ring from the day Tom had given it to her until this evening.

Marie hesitated to say anything about the matter. After all, she might be wrong. She didn't want to do Fanny any harm. And it wasn't her business.

nights Mr. Dullea will lecture on Temperance at the Salem U. B. church, Mountpleasant township.

Editors and publishers were made a special subject of prayer during prayer week. Some of our exchanges are expressing the hope that something was said for delinquent subscribers, as they needed it more.

Oh, Master Comic, more and more they ask,They plead to drain the laughter from thy flask.Who sets men laughing does a useful task!When first your song began Old Age was near.One robed in black for some one

"Stop, stop!" cried the Wicked
Water Witch,
As she rode her broomstick and waved her switch.
"I'll change you into some kind of a toy
Unless you give back my stolen boy."

Goodness me! This was a dreadful thing to hear, but just the same Little Jack Rabbit didn't give back the little boy whom he had rescued in the last story. No, indeed. Instead, he urged on Donkey Silver Heels, But, dear me! That little donkey was now carrying a double burden and before long the wicked witch caught up to him. It is no easy matter to get away from a witch on a broomstick. Everybody knows that in Fairyland a broomstick can go much faster than an airship. Oh, my, yes!
"Give me back the boy!" again screamed the witch, stretching out her bony arm, as she drew alongside the panting, breathless little donkey.
"Please don't give me back to her," begged the frightened child.
"I never will," cried the brave little rabbit, feeling in his pocket for the Magic Ruby Stone which the Fairy Queen had given him.
Then, as the Wicked Witch tried to lay hold of the child, the little bunny turned upon her the glowing ruby stone.

"Stop, stop! It burns!" she screamed.
"Burn her! Burn her, Ruby stone!
Burn her to the very bone!"
cried the little rabbit.
Pretty soon the Wicked Water Witch could no longer stand the heat from the burning ruby and, with a scream, she sailed away on her broomstick. But, oh dear me!
As she disappeared in the distance the little rabbit could hear her singing:
"Now I will kill a little green frog
That cries all day in a lonely bog!"
Of course the little bunny knew that she meant—she was going to kill dear, kind Uncle Lucky, whom she had changed from a rabbit into a frog, as I mentioned several stories ago. For a moment the poor little bunny didn't know what

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEWS ADAMS

THE BUSINESS YOU'RE IN

I LIKE to speculate as to the life business of all with whom I come in contact—that is, if they are workers. If they are idlers, it doesn't matter.

There is a process of the mind that is evident to any shrewd observer almost as soon as he hears the voice or watches the manner of another. We all have just a little touch of the "Sherlock Holmes" in us—and a very happy and useful touch it is, if well used.

There is something of beauty, however, in almost every bit of work a man or woman puts his or her hands to. It is only when the sordid and selfish end of life's task is adhered to that the beauty fades away. I have noticed how philosophical and calm minded most tillers of the soil are. I notice that lawyers are quite apt to be cold and unsympathetic—they get so used to hearing complaints and troubles.

Several prizes will be awarded to the different skaters so search in your attic and find some of ye old time makeups and come along. Mr. Murree is trying to please who are deserving and hopes to get the good will of all broad minded people. With the able assistance of Mr. Frank Stocks, chairman of the Gettysburg R. S. & A. Avoid Too Much
Dosing For Flu
Say Physicians

Its Toxins Upset Stomach
And Constant Dosing Further Disturbs Digestion.

According to heal authorities, a peculiarity of influenza is that its toxins upset the digestive system, especially in the case of children. Too much "dosing" still further disturbs the digestion, and should be avoided except on advice of a physician.

Vicks VapoRub is especially valuable because it is applied externally and so can be used freely with no risk of upsetting the digestion. Nor can it interfere with any other treatment your doctor may prescribe.

Rubbed on the throat and chest, Vicks acts two ways at once: (1) through the skin like a poultice, and (2) By means of its medicated vapors, released by body-heat and inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages.

In the present epidemic, as in 1918, Vicks is proving its usefulness in millions of homes. In spite of vastly increased capacity, it is again necessary to run the laboratories all night long, as the public now demands over 375,000 jars every 24 hours.—adv.

announcing The New PONTIAC BIG SIX

Introducing Big Car Standards of Luxury, Style and Performance at $745

TODAY a new type of low cost motoring luxury is available. It embraces big car style. It provides big car riding comfort. It embodies big car quality in unseen parts. It is offered by a brand new automobile—the New Pontiac Big Six.

Frankly, the New Pontiac Big Six was designed to appeal to a certain group. This group is made up of people who are beginning to move up in the world. Many of them will soon make the first step up in the quality of their cars. The New Pontiac Big Six was designed for them.

It comes to them entirely new in appearance. Stunning new bodies by Fisher contribute to the big car beauty and big car style presented by the car as a whole.

Progressive people are seeking greater luxury. The Pontiac Big Six offers them the luxury for which bodies by Fisher are famous the world over. It provides the smooth-riding qualities of a car 167 inches in overall length, with accurately balanced rotating mechanical parts and such advanced comfort features as adjustable drivers' seats.

It is a six with the added power of a larger L-head engine and the added smoothness imparted by a dynamically balanced, counter-weighted crankshaft and the famous Harmonic Balancer. Its new brakes are of the dirt-and-weather-proof internal four-wheel type.

It reveals big car performance even to the point of developing big car power and big car speed.

Only a few highlights in its construction have been mentioned. Just enough to prove that the Pontiac Big Six is entirely new and capable of meeting progressive Americans' demand. But the amazing thing about it is that it gives so much big car luxury, style and performance at prices which come within practically everyone's reach!

Prices $745 and up, f.o.b. factory, plus delivery charges. Bumpers and rear fender guards regular equipment at slight extra cost. Check Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices—they include lowest handling charges. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Do you like rock-butter and milk in chunks?

Why serve frozen milk—or butter that just breaks holes in the bread? Still more important, why spoil food by leaving it outdoors to freeze?

Refrigeration is a year-round necessity. More food is actually spoiled in winter than in summer because many housekeepers do not yet realize that most foods are harmed by freezing and that any food quickly spoils by alternate freezing and thawing.

The General Electric Refrigerator keeps your food at the scientifically correct temperature—always well below the danger point of 50 degrees—neither too hot nor too cold. Of course, it has a special separate compartment for freezing ice cubes and frozen desserts.

All the mechanism is up on top in an hermetically sealed steel casing, clear of dust and dirt. It is worry-proof and so automatic you do not even oil it.

HAD TO WORK TOO HARD

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—"After my second baby was born I had to work too hard and be on my feet too soon because my husband was ill. After his death I was in such a weakened and run-down condition that nothing seemed to help me. I am starting the fourth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel a great deal better. I am much stronger and don't get so tired out when I wash or work hard. I do housekeeping and dressmaking and I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound. I am willing to answer letters."—Mrs. GERTRUDE BURTIS, 414 S. Market St., Mt. Carmel, Pa.

IT'S DANGEROUS GROUND

you stand on—with a cough, a cold or gripe, and your blood impoverished. You must do something! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes redder blood—builds health and strength.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mundis of 30 W. Princess St., York, Pa., remarked: "My son was in a pitiable condition when he was young. He coughed incessantly and our doctor was not very encouraging. At the time we learned about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery he was scarcely able to get about, but there was a marked improvement while taking the first bottle. It took right hold of that cough, and he became well and strong. This 'Discovery' relieves bronchial irritation and tones up the general health." Dealers.

Safety, silence and simplicity are features of the new Ford six-brake system

ONE of the first things you will notice when you drive the new Ford is the quick, effective, silent action of its six-brake system.

This system gives you the highest degree of safety and reliability because the four-wheel service brakes and the separate emergency or parking brakes are all of the mechanical, internal-expanding type, with braking surfaces fully enclosed for protection against mud, water, sand, etc.

The many advantages of this type of braking system have long been recognized. They are brought to you in the new Ford through a series of mechanical improvements embodying much that is new in design and manufacture.

A particularly unique feature is the simple way by which a special drum has been constructed to permit the use of two sets of internal brakes on the rear wheels.

The brake construction on the front wheels also is unusual. Here the brakes are enclosed without the use of a leather boot or sliding joint to protect the linkage between the brake rods and the mechanism on the brake plate.

A further improvement is effected by the self-centering feature of the four-wheel brakes—an exclusive Ford development. Through this construction, the entire surface of the shoe is brought in contact with the drum the instant you press your foot on the brake pedal. This prevents screeching and howling and makes the Ford brakes unusually silent.

Another feature of the Ford brakes is the ease of adjustment.

The four-wheel brakes are adjusted by turning a regulating screw conveniently located on the outside of each brake plate. This screw is so notched that all four brakes can be set alike simply by listening to the "clicks."

The emergency or parking brakes on the new Ford require little attention. However, should they need adjustment at any time, consult your Ford dealer for prompt, courteous, and economical service. He works under close factory supervision and he has been specially trained and equipped to help you get the greatest possible use from your car over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.
